

ABSTRACT

A device for activating personal protection devices activates the personal protection devices as a function of a delay
5 between a first signal from an impact sensor system situated in the vehicle front and a second signal from a centrally located acceleration sensor system, the first and second signals each identifying an impact.